

Script, Arnhem 3

By: Luiza Jaffe Misiuk Barbosa, Pavlos Kountouriotis, Anushka Nair, Korina Papadimitriou
Kordova San & Mariken Overdijk

MEME: thanks, jesus for this food - de nada

Characters

South-American Woman

American Woman

Christian Woman

2 extra's in the back, a couple in the coffee corner

Action

Christian woman in her 50s is sharing a poster (meme): on one side is depicted agricultural labourers working for a minimum wage to provide the coffee and food for the more affluent part of the world juxtaposed, on the other side, with an image of a Christian well to do family thanking Jesus for their food.

The coffee shop owner is a young girl and daughter of an affluent family who are the owners of these 'exploitive' plantations. She presumes to be inclusive and repulses her own family, but at the same time, she treats her own employee, who is related to these hard-working laborer's in a disrespectful manner.

When the Christian charitable woman comes up with a poster addressing this topic of inequality, she acts as if she totally understands and agrees. Not aware of her own behavior towards her own employee. The couple in the back are so self-occupied that all these issues on this poster pass by unnoticed.

Thanks, Jesus, for this food.

de nada.

Comment

Tac