

Since many of you are arriving in Toronto today for SCMS, I thought I'd send around this invitation again, as you plan your busy weekends...

We look forward to seeing you at the Fake News Poetry Workshop (with Alex Juhasz!) 6-8 and the Glitch party (in celebration of Praba Pilar!) 8-late(ish) on Saturday (all details below), if you can squeeze them into your schedules of fabulous events.

I feel pretty amazing that both of these are happening at my house on the same night.

Here's the original invitation with all the details:

Hello friends & colleagues,

I'm writing to invite you to Alex Juhasz's Fake News Poetry Workshop as One Try at Radical Digital Media Literacy event in Toronto during the SCMS conference. This is one of 10 poetry workshops that Alex will be hosting this Spring as part of her ongoing #100HardTruths project, which she began on Jan 20, 2017:

In the Spring of 2018, I will be collaborating approximately ten times with poets in their communities. Together with our participants we will adapt, extend, translate and make more usable the many resources currently available in the "online digital media primer," #100hardtruths-#fakenews, a website that I built over the first 100 days of the Trump administration as an act of engaged, enraged intellectual citizenship. - Alex Juhasz

So, please join us:

When: Saturday March 17, 6-8pm ... and stay afterwards for an 8-till-late GLITCHing party (see below for details)

Where: (the home of T.L. Cowan & Jasmine Rault and cats Sophie & Bucket) - a 7 min walk north from the Ossington subway station.

What to expect: Alex will lead us through her process, we'll chat & hopefully we'll write some poems or poetry-adjacent materials.

What to bring: Whatever you'd like to drink (we'll have some booze and non-booze on hand) & your date(s), if you'd like.

Please RSVP for the workshop dates you're bringing so we know how much food to order. Please don't "Reply All"!

*The 8-till-late GLITCHing party is the unofficial closing event of artist Praba Pilar's residency in Toronto, hosted by the Toronto Trans- Feminist & Queer Digital (TFQ Digital) working group.

No need to RSVP for the 8-till-late GLITCHing party. We hope you can come to both!

See you in Toronto!